Welcome to BASA

BASA acts as the voice for the industry, supporting its members by representing and promoting the industry, offering guidance on technical and compliance issues to members, providing networking opportunities and providing members with support services. We are an association run for our members by our members and our greatest strength resides in the experience and expertise of the volunteers who agree to sit on our working groups and task forces. Adhesives and sealants represent over £1.2 billion in annual demand.

BASA are also a member of the Alliance of Chemical Associations, an alliance of UK chemical associations formed in 1991 as the Alliance of Industry Associations (AIA) and renamed to ACA on 1st July 2014. Further information on the ACA can be found under useful links.

Welcome to the new BASA Members-only website - now known as the Info Hub!

The search function available under resources will allow you to find specific content. The general search function (top right of this page) is to find member company information only.

Because you work for a BASA Member company you have access to all of the working group information and guidance documents that we create for you. You also have the opportunity to connect with other members by searching the Directory or registering for an upcoming event. You may also access your membership details, review account history and pay all your invoices online from the Account area. Go to the website training section at the bottom of the page to watch our website tour to learn more! At this time if you want to delete an existing contact at your company we would ask that you email enquiries@basa.uk.com and we will delete them from all databases.

How to download your Membership certificate?

1. Click on My Info.
2. Click on the related businesses tab.
3. You can then download your certificate at the bottom of the page.

Where do I find working group information?

- The new website is organised differently
- We don't have lists of the WG posts organised on single pages
- To help with the functionality the posts are added as resources, which are searchable
- We then have a set of forums which are the tool by which we are sending the automatic notifications
- Let's start with the resources

Policy paper UK REACH alternative transitional registration model (ATRM)

Created By: James Williams

Date Added: 6/5/2024

09 November 2023

Following the United Kingdom's departure from the EU, the government established an independent regulatory framework for chemicals known as UK REACH. UK REACH retains both the fundamental approach and key principles of the EU REACH and is focussed on ensuring that Great Britain (England, Scotland and Wales) continues to uphold high levels of protection of human health and of the environment. EU REACH continues to apply in Northern Ireland under the Windsor Framework. In response to concerns raised by the chemicals industry about the significant cost to businesses of accessing EU data packages to support UK REACH transitional registrations, Defra, alongside the Health and Safety Executive and Environment Agency (UK REACH regulators) have been exploring options for an alternative transitional registration model (ATRM).

Department
for Environment
Food & Rural Affairs

The alternative transitional registration model (ATRM)

The ATRM will aim to reduce the costs to businesses while continuing to ensure our overarching commitment to high levels of protection of human health and the environment. This has been an intensive review of the way we implement UK REACH and the current regulatory framework, including engagement with industry REACH specialists. This statement outlines the policy direction, which we are confident meets the objectives of the project.

The review has looked at how UK REACH works as a whole. The starting point is how the intrinsic properties (hazards) of chemicals on the market are identified. In recent years, industry, the scientific community, and regulators have significantly increased the global understanding of the hazards of tens of thousands of chemicals. There is now more comprehensive information available on the hazards associated with over 22,000 chemicals commonly used in Europe. While the understanding of hazards is the starting point, it must be complemented with in-depth knowledge of uses and exposure of these chemicals if we are to achieve the aim of effective assessment and management of risk. Under EU REACH, data was only available to the UK on the uses and exposure routes of chemicals at the EU level.

In parallel, we have drawn significant insights from our initial experience in implementing UK REACH. It has become evident as part of the review, that our regulators do not need to hold a complete replica of all the registration data on all chemical substances held under EU REACH in order for UK REACH to undertake its regulatory work. We can adopt a more targeted approach by using information already available and building on work done in the EU and globally to identify areas of emerging risk and shape our regulatory priorities. This will allow us to develop the detailed information we hold on chemical substances in a more targeted way.

Our ambition

The government's ambition is to establish, for the first time, a more comprehensive picture of where and how chemicals are used in Great Britain. This is to make sure industry is best fulfilling its duty to ensure the safe use of chemicals and to enable our regulators to assess the level of exposure and risk that chemicals present in Great Britain, and to take targeted regulatory actions where those risks are deemed unacceptable. The publication of the risk management options analysis for perfluoroalkyl and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) earlier this year showed how this approach can work in practice.

Under this approach we can tailor the requirements we set for Great Britain registration of chemicals to focus on gathering information on the use and exposure of the chemicals, in particular those of higher concern. We can augment this by requiring any further data needed for regulatory purposes in a targeted way, as new or emerging risks are identified by the UK or other global sources.

EU CLP - 23rd ATP sent to WTO

Created By: Lorna Williams

Date Added: 10/1/2024

The 23rd Adaptation to Technical Progress (ATP) to the CLP Regulation, Regulation (EC) No. 1272/2008 has been notified to the World Trade Organisation, Technical Barriers to Trade (WTO-TBT) Committee.

The 23rd ATP introduces changes to Table 3 of Part 3, Annex VI to the CLP Regulation, the list of harmonised classification and labelling entries. The update includes introducing new or revised entries for 32 substances or substance groups.

It closes for comment on the 24th November 2024 and can be found here <https://eping.wto.org/en/Search/Index?viewData=%20G/TBT/N/EU/1086>. Adoption is expected in quarter 4 of 2024.

Lists

For the moment we are not yet operating the lists

Drop-in clinic notifications are still coming from Mailchimp, but we will be transferring by the end of the year

We intend to have lists of each event so that each year we only send repeat emails to those who have opted to receive them

We hope to have other lists so that we can target information to the people who want to receive it
